

New Zealand Steel

Fact Sheet

Company Overview

- New Zealand Steel is New Zealand's sole producer of flat rolled steel products for the building, construction, manufacturing and agricultural industries.
- It operates a fully integrated steel mill at Glenbrook, about 60 kilometres south of Auckland, as well as Pacific Steel, a manufacturing facility in Ōtāhuhu, and Steltech, a manufacturer of custom welded columns and beams in Takanini.
- It produces around 670,000 tonnes of steel per year.
- Key products include roofing, structural beams, steel framing and reinforcing steel.
- Its brands include COLORSTEEL®, AXXIS® and ZINCALUME®.
- New Zealand Steel was established as a company in 1965, and the mill has been in operation since 1968.
- It uses ironsand ore mined at Waikato North Head to create its products.
- New Zealand Steel is part of the BlueScope Group, a global company with facilities in 18 countries.

Company Offering

Economy

- New Zealand Steel contributes over $900M to the New Zealand economy annually and adds $398 million in value to the Auckland region.
- A local supply chain of steel products helps to ensure reliable product deliveries and smooth project rollout throughout New Zealand.

Sustainability

- Parent company BlueScope has set a goal for net zero greenhouse gas emissions across its operations by 2050.
- New Zealand Steel has also committed to a 12% reduction in greenhouse gas emission intensity for steel making and 30% for non-steel making facilities by 2030.
- 92% of Glenbrook electricity comes from renewable sources and co-generation on site.

Employment

- New Zealand Steel supports the employment of 4,000 people across its New Zealand and Pacific Island operations: it employs 1,400 directly and a further 2,500 indirectly.
- It is the biggest single-site manufacturing employer in New Zealand, with 1,300 employees on site at the Glenbrook steel mill.
- It trains more than 40 apprentices and graduates annually.

---

Media

For media enquiries please contact:

Vicki Woodley, External Affairs Manager Vicki.Woodley@bluescopesteel.com

---